Then and Now

EVENDAY LIVES, 1991

In 1989, the Pennsylvania Office of Developmental Programs (ODP) invited people with disabilities, families, advocates, governmental officials, and service providers to think about what the future should look like for all people with disabilities. Pennsylvania had been a national leader in creating community services as an alternative to institutional services, but it was time to think more deeply about what the purpose of community services should be — what kinds of experiences and opportunities people should have and what the overall outcome should be.

For months, participants conducted research about best practices and discussed their findings. Most importantly, the planning group asked people with intellectual disabilities what was important to them. The result was a list of Everyday Lives principles that has guided ODP and the service system since Everyday Lives was published in 1991.

Deeply rooted in the concept of self-determination, Everyday Lives promotes the belief that, with the support of family and friends, people with disabilities can and should decide how to live their lives.

The original Everyday Lives told us what was important to people with disabilities and made recommendations about how the service system should increase opportunities for full community participation, provide individuals with more control over services, and improve the system’s accountability for ensuring health, safety, and positive outcomes.

CREATING EVERYDAY LIVES, 2016

In November 2014, ODP formed the Information Sharing and Advisory Committee (ISAC), an ongoing committee to discuss policies and practices and make recommendations to ODP.

More than 265 stakeholders conducted research and evaluated best practices to determine the most important steps for ODP to take to improve system delivery.

Recommendations were submitted by the Futures Planning Work Group and were further developed and explored by ISAC members, resulting in this edition of Everyday Lives.
EVERYDAY LIVES: VALUES IN ACTION

The foundation of Everyday Lives: Values in Action is two statements:

1. We value what is important to people with disabilities and their families, who are striving for an everyday life. An everyday life is about opportunities, relationships, rights, and responsibilities. It is about being a member of the community, having a valued role, making a contribution to society, and having one’s rights as a citizen fully respected. It is a vision that we should all be working toward together.

2. People with disabilities have a right to an everyday life; a life that is no different than that of all other citizens. This continues to be the truest statement on which we can build our work.

Everyday Lives will be a guide to ODP as it develops policy and designs programs. Providers of services will use the recommendations of Everyday Lives to support individuals and their families to achieve an everyday life. Everyday Lives will guide everyone toward the possibility of an everyday life.

What is Important to Families?

Family is integral to an everyday life. We are born into families and we choose families. Families are the foundation of our early development and often our achievements as adults.

If people with disabilities are to enjoy the everyday life that all citizens should enjoy, families will play a key role beginning in the earliest years by having a positive and promising vision for their child. Families can do this by knowing how to facilitate their child’s full inclusion into the school and community, by ensuring their child has all the experiences and opportunity needed to learn and grow toward independence, by having good advocacy skills, and by preparing for all of life’s transitions into adulthood.

Families need support. Families need information, advocacy skills, and connections to other families. The realization of Everyday Lives is dependent on the service system successfully partnering with families to achieve the hopes and dreams of their family members.

VALUES IN ACTION: RECOMMENDATIONS

SAC recommendations for Values in Action are built on the values, goals, expectations, and aspirations of people with disabilities and their families. The recommendations are a guide for ODP to develop policy and design programs for people with disabilities, families, providers of service, and advocates who support people to have an everyday life.

1. ASSURE EFFECTIVE COMMUNICATION

   Every person has an effective way to communicate in order to express choice and ensure their health and safety. All forms of communication should consider and include the individual’s language preferences and use of current technology.

2. PROMOTE SELF-DIRECTION, CHOICE, & CONTROL

   Personal choice and control over all aspects of life must be supported for every person. Choice about where to live, whom to live with, what to do for a living, and how to have fun all are key choices in life, as are seemingly small choices, such as what to eat, what to wear, when to wake up in the morning, and when to go to bed. It is important to be able to trust the people who provide assistance, to feel confident that they respect you and your right to manage your life, and to enjoy each other’s company.

   Self-direction works when individuals have clear and understandable information, opportunities to exercise choice, and assistance with making decisions when needed. Self-direction is only possible when family, friends, and people who provide supports respect the individual’s preferences and their right to make mistakes and facilitate the implementation of the individual’s decisions.
3. INCREASE EMPLOYMENT

Employment is a centerpiece of adulthood and must be available for every person. The benefits of employment for people with disabilities are significant and are the same as for people without disabilities.

EMPLOYMENT IS:

- Feeling proud
- Meeting new people
- Having self-confidence
- Building new skills
- Getting a paycheck
- Paying taxes

4. SUPPORT FAMILIES THROUGHOUT THE LIFESPAN

The vast majority of people with disabilities in Pennsylvania live with their families. Families need support in order to make an everyday life possible. Families need information, resources, and training. They need connections with other families and support services. Listening to people with disabilities and their families is key to providing supports that help them achieve an everyday life.

5. PROMOTE HEALTH, WELLNESS, AND SAFETY

Promote physical and mental health, wellness, and personal safety for every individual and their family. Promoting physical and mental health means providing information about health and wellness, emotional support, and encouragement. Tools that help every individual adopt a healthy lifestyle — including good nutrition, healthy diets, physical activity, and strategies to reduce and manage stress and protect oneself from all types of abuse and exploitation — must be provided.

6. SUPPORT PEOPLE WITH COMPLEX NEEDS

People with disabilities who have both physical and behavioral health needs receive the medical treatment and supports needed throughout their lifespans. When individuals, families, and providers plan and modify supports as people’s needs change to meet these challenges, people are more able to live an everyday life. Opportunities for a full community life are dependent on adequate supports and the commitment to build capacity within the larger human service delivery system.
7. DEVELOP AND SUPPORT QUALIFIED STAFF

People with disabilities receiving services benefit when staff who support them are well trained. Values, ethics, and person-centered decision-making can be learned and used in daily practice through mentorship and training. Providing professional training that strengthens relationships and partnerships between individuals, families, and direct support professionals will improve the quality of support.

8. SIMPLIFY THE SYSTEM

The system of supports and funding of those supports must be as straightforward and uncomplicated as possible. This will allow for greater understanding and use of the system by everyone — most importantly the individual needing and receiving supports.

9. IMPROVE QUALITY

Together we must plan and deliver services and supports that adhere to our values, measure person-centered outcomes, and continuously improve an individual’s quality of life. All stakeholders must be engaged in the process of measuring how well services assist people in achieving an everyday life.

10. EXPAND OPTIONS FOR COMMUNITY LIVING

Expand the range of housing options in the community so all people can live where and with whom they want to live. Listening to people with disabilities and their families, providers, and support coordinators will help people locate affordable and accessible housing, find housemates, and identify housing resources/supports and other government benefits that, when blended with natural supports, will promote an everyday life.

11. INCREASE COMMUNITY PARTICIPATION

Being involved in community life creates opportunities for new experiences and interests, the potential to develop friendships, and the ability to make a contribution to the community. An interdependent life, where people with and without disabilities are connected, enriches all of our lives.
12. PROVIDE COMMUNITY SERVICES TO EVERYONE

Some people with disabilities — whether living on their own, with families, or in institutions — are waiting for community services. The goal is to build a system that has the capacity to provide services in a timely fashion for all people who need supports.

13. EVALUATE FUTURE INNOVATIONS BASED ON EVERYDAY LIVES PRINCIPLES

Future consideration of service models and reimbursement strategies must be based on the principles of person-centered planning, individual choice, control over who provides services and where, and full engagement in community life. Innovative approaches should be evaluated based on the recommendations of Everyday Lives, including: employment, recognizing and supporting the role of families, and meeting the diverse needs of all individuals. Stakeholders should be fully engaged in designing, implementing, and monitoring the outcomes and effectiveness of innovative service models and service delivery systems.
